Looking around you, you can probably see plastic of some sort. You're probably wearing clothes that are also made of plastic. So is your computer. Much of your food and many drinks come in plastic containers – like bags or bottles. Most toys are plastic. Plastic is everywhere! This is because it is so useful in just about everything people do. That's why plastic pollution is a serious problem. Many things we use are natural materials like fruit, vegetables, paper and cotton. Plastic isn't natural. Plastic lives for hundreds, or thousands, of years, it doesn't decompose. Plastic enters the food chain: not only fish, but also small animals that live in the ground can eat very small pieces of plastic. People eat animals, who eat plastic! It's time to do something: let's stop plastic pollution!
